Pretty sure at some point in time, when pokémon trading was introduced, it was something like I give you a guy, you give me a pokémon. That system could be applied to the whole game. You don't have to always trade between the cities, but that could be used to obtain rarer pokémon (different area). I love the idea but I am gonna give it a no because the new region would lead to a ton of new and interesting pokémon. I also think it needs to be an original new idea that isn't something that is already pretty well done. Yes, that would be a useful feature. The arbitrary nature of it would force you to think about your team composition and perhaps even how you would protect your weaker pokémon. An example would be that you could either put your precious dragonite on a scizor and then focus on your pokémon that have a higher chance of surviving. The pokémon whose use relies on its low defenses, or low HP pokémon. Alternatively you might place your pokémon so they both survive but if you make a mistake he might die, or if he survives but you make a mistake and he faints you're down a pokémon and your opponent gets a free turn to act. Pokemon Go featured a far-reaching new partnership with Japanese toy company, Takara. Takara is well-known for making figures for anime and game titles such as the famous Hello Kitty line. This was exciting news, especially for those of us who were starving to see the cute animals and creations of the Alola region in action! After downloading Pok Transporter and having it installed on your device, you will be able to download the free application which will look like a set of instructions. To download the app on your 3DS, just tap the circle button in the top right corner of the home screen and then scroll until you see the small, black arrow symbol with white outlined letters. Click that and follow the instructions. You can transfer up to 20 Pokemon from those other games to any game!

Once the Pokemon are returned to their pokeballs, they start acting funny. They're all agitated and are even violent with each other, not to mention the fact that they're covered in lots of gooey stuff. The Pokemon are losing control of their minds, and the Scald status effect goes off the charts. They must be healed by trainers that have been specially-trained in how to handle them. Once the Pokemon are healed, they'll do battle with each other, and the winner takes home the reward for their victory. They'll also get powerful new moves and abilities that they can use in battle. Where your Pokemon battle against each other in an outdoor arena, here's something to consider: you've got to take special care to keep your Pokmon healthy in Alola. You'll have to take them out to get a good look at the weather, too, and look out for any dangerous little surprises the Alola region may throw at your Pokemon. Weather makes a huge difference in battle, and that's only the first factor you'll have to worry about. Why not use this chance to level up and evolve your Pokemon? This is something that you'll definitely want to make when you've started the story: the Alola Pokedex! The Alola Pokedex is like a helpful chronicle of all the pokemon you've encountered in the game, all in one convenient book. It's a very powerful tool when your adventures are over, as it's the only means of exchanging all the information between players! Alola isn't all about exploring the forest and catching Pokemon, though. There's an entire world of the human characters out there that you'll be sure to meet along your journey. And you can befriend all of them for your collection of friends! It's a fun way to add a little humanity to your adventure. 5ec8ef588b
